IS PROBLEM FOR SCIENTISTS

Will Have Hard Work to Prove a Division Between Animate and Inanimate Nature.

We refuse to be jerked from the easy and virtuous tenor of our lives by the news that Professor Schaefer can produce life artificially. Was it not Sydney Smith who explained Coleridge's great work on metaphysics on the theory that it was "only his fun?" Possibly the learned Schaefer is amusing himself, and certainly he is amusing us, for we have heard this story before. Before any substance can be said to have been artificially endowed with life it must be proved—not merely asserted—that it did not already possess life, and as no one knows what life is the proof would be hard. But the professor "gave the show away" when he admitted that "the line between living and lifeless objects is growing less and less sharp as science penetrates into the heart of things." It may eventually be demonstrated that there is no such line, sharp or otherwise, except in the mind of the scientist, and that there is, in fact, no division between animate and inanimate nature. Science might save itself much speculative trouble by postulating a theory that life and matter are inseparable, that matter in its every form contains some elusive property which causes the cohesion of its parts and which is indistinguishable from the life of an organism.—San Francisco Argonaut.

SCENT AS AN INSOMNIA CURE

Pine Needles and Rose Leaves in Pillow Are Declared to Be Excellent Soporifics.

Scent has other attractions than a mere appeal to the nose, London Answers states. Anybody, for instance, who suffers from insomnia may find relief in perfumes.

Collect a number of fresh pine needles and fill a bag with them; carefully rip open your pillow and place the bag amidst the feathers in the pillow. The perfume of the pines is often an excellent soporific.

A bag of dried hops used in the same way is just as good. Dried rose leaves, mixed with dried clover heads, give out a delicious perfume and helps a weary one to woo the god of sleep.

A teaspoonful of eau de cologne in a warm bath is most refreshing, while scent placed on the forehead of anyone who is suffering from headache generally gives relief.

THE CUT.

Lord Grey de Ruthyn, who is a simple rancher at Roundup, Musselshell county, Montana, is so enamored of western life that it is doubtful if he will ever return to claim his proud and ancient title.

"Traveling in Montana," said a New York editor, "I met Lord Grey de Ruthyn when he was Cecil Clifton. He expressed then a great scorn for your aristocrat or snob."

"Talking about aristocratic snobs over a pipe and glass in Musselshell, the future Lord Grey de Ruthyn gave a loud laugh and said:

"Why, the English aristocrat is so ridiculously exclusive that, in shaving, he will often cut himself."

FAMILIAR LEGEND.

"I ought to have some legends connected with the place," said the landlord. "They bring trade, legends do. There needn't necessarily be any truth in them, you know."

"Stick to the legend that you are running a first-class hotel," advised the guest. "That legend will catch a few suckers every year."

SOCIETY FAD.

"She has a haughty air." "Some excuse for it, though. She's been introduced to some of the most prominent gunmen."

ANYTHING TO ESCAPE.

"You can't come across me, sir!" "Confound your pesky hide! If you'll keep still long enough I'll walk around you!"

THE OBJECTION.

Auto Salesman—Don't you think your wife would like this model? Mr. Sadlife—Yes, if no one tells her I like it.—New York Globe.

COMING AND GOING.

"Mrs. Merivale says she has a passing acquaintance with you." "Yes. When I was coming away from Reno I met her going in."

We have been hammering away a long time trying to drive one thought into the minds of the people of this community—that we will not sell hardware to anyone at any price that we do not know to be good.

We have succeeded doing business this way, and we are not going to change our system.
